This guide is a collection of tips for regular Photoshop users to become more efficient at using Photoshop and elements. Don't waste time getting back to the tutorial after completing the steps. Apply the tips here before you visit the tutorial. Photoshop Elements 12 has a new interface that's so similar to Photoshop that it's almost indistinguishable from it. This is a big change and something you need to understand before trying out this tutorial, otherwise you might find yourself in trouble. The difference is at its most obvious in the menu bar. Elements has a similar menu bar to Photoshop but with red outlines and a label design that uses the same font as the Windows menu bar. Create your own brushes in Adobe Photoshop elements 12 For this tutorial, you'll learn how to do a quick and easy way of creating a photo brush in Photoshop elements. The tutorial is quick but very effective. You can edit a brush to make it suitable to your image. Brushes are used to create a realistic effect, especially of paint. To create a new brush, open Photoshop elements and go to Edit, which is the third icon from the left on the main menu. To open the Brush Options dialog box, go to Edit and choose Brush and Pencil. On the left-hand side, you can see the brush options. On the right-hand side you can see the various brushes in the brush library. To create a brush, click on the Brushes folder icon and select Create New. You'll notice the dialog box mentioned above. In the dialog box, you can rename the brush. You can create multiple brushes and edit them. Let's select a brush we want to use. I went to brushes/Ends/Pixel Extents. This brush will be used as a brush texture. To edit the brush, you can see the settings on the left. Let's edit a few settings. I'll change the Size to 5. This is fine for this brush, so I'll leave it at 5. The Technique is Quick, which is fine, as the style doesn't need much work. So you can leave that at Quick. The X-Axis is

Left and the Y-Axis is Top. This is the default setting, but if you change it to a different axis, you can use more space in the corner to show more details in your brush texture. The spacing from the edge to the center is important, and you can see that I've set this a681f4349e

Learn about the greatest one-two punch in the history of Cleveland sports: The Browns' Dec. 12, 1997, home win over the Steelers. (Click to enlarge) It all begins with a quarterback. Here, Hall of Fame legend Terry Bradshaw, who won a record 71 consecutive games as a starter for the Steelers, looks over some X's and O's in practice. (Mark Lyons/SI) Bradshaw pumps up his

(Al Bello/SI) The Browns, one of the NFL's most storied franchises, will get another chance at the Super Bowl with a first-round bye in this postseason. The Browns' Dec. 12, 1997, home win over the Steelers, was the Browns' most monumental victory ever. For all of the Browns' annual supporters and apologists, the three-point victory over a young, talented Steelers team was fun to relive. But the greatest moment of the first round of the playoffs in Cleveland in 1997 was when the Browns walked into Heinz Field with an NFL-record 11 players on their roster. Remember the Browns' roster? Q: How to install and integrate dynamic_sidebar with a specific post type I have a custom post type named "about" so I am working with post type "about". I want to create a sidebar only in the about post type and I want it to be dynamic. I tried to create a new file named "about-sidebar.php" with this code: 'Footer Sidebar', 'id' => 'footer-sidebar', 'description' => '', 'before_widget' => '', 'after_widget' => '',

'before_title' => '', 'after_title' => '')); ?> But the problem is the "Footer Sidebar" is not showing... A: register_sidebar, registers a sidebar using the WP_Sidebar class. So you should have something like that: $sidebar_instance = new WP_Sidebar('footer-sidebar'); $sidebar_instance->show(); But you should also check the wordpress documentation on creating and displaying a custom sidebar for the blog posts.
