Community Kalypso Media will be hosting a presentation and panel discussion tomorrow at 2 p.m. at the Game Developers Conference. Titled "Evolving a World, From Script to Level," the presentation is led by this year's Kalypso Game Jam winner, Andrew Leman.If you have a thing for retro games, or just want to learn about game jams, you'll be sure to get your fill. It's that time of year again! That time when we all put on our best looking Christmas sweaters, put on our best-looking, most appropriate jewelry, and sing about not being in the place we really want to be. Of course, there's a reason for all of this. This time of year is all about celebrating with your friends and family, trying to find a way to make everyone's lives better, and enjoying the simple things that make you happy. But what about that guy who sits in front of you in a church or mosque on Christmas Eve, and doesn't want to celebrate because it's not the right time? He's getting angry that his "righteous" friends are enjoying themselves and celebrating, while he's spending his day "preaching" to people who don't even want to hear it. He's upset because he knows it's the right thing to do, and it's not really the right time for it. Maybe the reason why some people feel they can't participate is because they're afraid. What if they're not seen as good? What if they're seen as the "bad guy"? What if they're the minority? You see, our world is very structured. We have very clear rules, and very clear paths for everything. But this is the holiday season, and we are all supposed to be together. Is this a good thing? Do we need to have clear guidelines for how we live our lives, and who can get on board? I think we do. To avoid being the "bad guy" for someone else, you need to be able to understand why they don't want to participate. Then, you need to figure out why they don't want to participate. Usually, there are four kinds of answers to these questions. You can "attack" them; you can make them feel bad for not doing it; you can give them an opportunity to do it later; and you can learn to live with it. In the last section, I talk about the fourth option; I talk

 PDF, ePub, Mobi and more March 7, 2009 – 55 pages – The Ten Commandments for Gun Control Advocates by Bob Owens Excerpt: The conflicts around the world seem to be pulling this nation apart. The warmongers — Bush and Cheney — are turning our troops loose for the purpose of getting other countries involved in constant "blood for oil" conflicts that keep them short of the resources they need to survive. Our multinational corporations are working on their overseas assets with the full blessing of our government to serve their "bottom line," while ensuring that the politicians and military personnel in power are the ones who reap the most benefits. We are being attacked by a widening variety of resource-poor Third World economies, and those who have dedicated themselves to this world domination agenda are pursuing the most delusional policies imaginable. Replay the Video below to see excerpts from the film "Savior, Lord…" Pray for Our Righteousness and Power "Thy sins have taken away the light of thy face; confession of thy sins, and faith, in the light that is coming, is 1 Tim. 6:15" ~ Poland's Pizan The following is a review from my book By Bob Owens I realized long ago that I would never, as long as I write and research, lay claim to neutrality. As a historian of the 20th century, the last thing I would do, were I to write to aid and comfort in the task of unearthing the truth about what we all say and do every day, is to lend aid and comfort to any person or to institution who has engaged in crooked and abusive practices. I would never sit at the feet of self-professed whistleblowers who tout so-called "lost causes" and promote victims and corruption where much to the contrary there is no one truly to blame, but ourselves. There is no doubt that there have been scandals and evil practices throughout our "history" -- with the worst periods regularly being tragedies of the bloodiest kind. However, history is a process that includes personal choices and sincere attempts to seek the truth after one has faced the facts. Dr Samuel Adams had the moral courage to listen to the cries of the Boston Massacre victims and several years later he was imprisoned for saying that he was "ready to
