The effect of in vitro culture system (IBC) on the quality of culture-grown sunflower plants was evaluated. Plants were grown under three different photoperiod conditions (16h of light [L]:8h of dark [D], 14L:10D and 10L:14D) with or without the addition of 2.2 µM gibberellin (GA3) to the culture medium. In terms of total dry weight, sunflower plantlets grown under 14L:10D showed an increase of 50%, but those grown under 16L:8D showed a decrease of 30%, when 2.2 µM GA3 was applied to the medium. Leaf growth was not affected by photoperiod conditions. The leaf chlorophyll content was higher in the plants grown under 16L:8D than in those grown under 14L:10D and 10L:14D. Chlorophylls a+b, trans-cis-abtriene content and the yield of chlorophylls were higher under 16L:8D in the presence of GA3. Chlorophyll a/b ratio was negatively affected by the photoperiod treatments. The application of GA3 did not change this ratio. Although photosynthesis increased when GA3 was applied, a significant decrease was observed in both the photosynthetic rate of net photosynthesis and the effective quantum yield of Photosystem II after 8 days of culture. The maximum photochemical efficiency of Photosystem II ($F(v)/F(m)$) was reduced in plants grown under 14L:10D and 16L:8D conditions when plants were cultured in the absence of GA3. When GA3 was applied during the first 4 days of culture, $F(v)/F(m)$ was increased only in plants grown under 16L:8D. The levels of

Well, you may as well strap one of these onto your side and go for it. Remember, you're going to be upside-down, so the camera will be seeing you from behind. The pump is courtesy of JDPump.us, which has created this flow-art piece, called Three-D, to show what it would look like if someone were to be filmed as they pumped gas. Apparently, you can't use a regular iPhone in that scenario, as the round lens would block the view. You do have to use a front-facing camera for this one. The video is a stop-motion piece created by a team of artists based in New York. In fact, it took four hours to film the sequence. The result, which lasts five minutes, is created by using a Morphe Brushes light painting app, and it shows you how small and intimate this small world we live in really is. The piece, called Paparazzi, is the result of an e79caf774b

Like most people, Hayden has struggled to cope with how the truth is being manipulated to go against NSA and FBI. Mike Hayden opened the show saying that in the past few years, the government has become too big. It's obvious he was referring to the US Government. He continued saying the NSA and FBI have become too big and too powerful. It's something Mike Hayden feels strongly about. Mike Hayden confirmed the NSA collects everything but that it is actively monitoring, all American citizens. That is a big difference from what the FBI has been doing and what NSA has been doing with the NSA and FBI working hand in hand. Mike Hayden also stated that the NSA collects and searches the Internet and can do so for Americans that are connected to American Internet servers. When specifically asked by Bill O'Reilly, if the NSA collected all emails sent by American citizens Mike Hayden said that it would be "an absolute lie." Mike Hayden knows that the NSA was able to collect, read and listen to the calls of American citizens who were talking to someone located overseas. When Bill O'Reilly specifically asked what else the NSA collects, Hayden said that they can, and they do collect as many "data-points" as they can. These "data-points", Hayden explained, are anything they can possibly collect on American citizens. Like email, cell phone calls, and social media posts. Then Bill O'Reilly asked Mike Hayden if this means that the NSA has been spying on American citizens. Hayden said that the NSA did collect information on American citizens. That this information is not illegal. Then Bill O'Reilly asked if the NSA can access all of our information without going to court. Hayden said yes they can, and they do so. Bill O'Reilly then asked if these activities crossed the
