Few-mode fiber links as a large-capacity multiplexed optical link. We theoretically demonstrate large-capacity few-mode fiber (FMF) based optical links. It is shown that four equal-capacity FMF links can be optically coupled at each end via a multimode fiber (MMF) with a relative bend radius of 75 mm, and that a wavelength-division-multiplexed 40 Gbit/s nonlinear polarization-maintained FMF link, with a transmission distance of 60 km, can be constructed in a single piece of fiber. As a further extension, we consider a link having two 40-Gbit/s nonlinear polarization-maintained FMF links in series and a 3-km long MMF link in between. The rising incidences of reported and confirmed novel coronavirus cases in the United States underscore the need to develop vaccines for the novel coronavirus (2019-nCoV), which causes severe respiratory infection. However, the virus is not easy to transmit, posing the risk of recombination and reemergence. Moreover, there are presently no approved vaccines or drugs for the treatment of 2019-nCoV. There is an urgent need to establish a robust vaccine platform against 2019-nCoV before the virus is introduced into the human population. Coronaviruses possess a unique type of viral RNA-dependent RNA polymerase (RdRP) from the Y-family of the Nidovirales family. The Y-family RdRPs has been classified into six different groups (I-VI) and the RdRP of the newly isolated 2019-nCoV belongs to group II. Y-RdRP is essential for the replication and transcription of viral RNA. e79caf774b

According to the Telia Sonera press release, the company will begin offering this "interactive" service in Madrid, Barcelona, Valencia, Seville, Malaga and Palma from October 1. As well as the ability to pay your utility bills online, it will include the ability to purchase electricity (€3,000 credit), gas (€1,000 credit), in Madrid, and public transport (€500 credit). The press release also explains how customers will be able to choose between several tariffs each month, and pay for their consumption using credit or bank transfer. Although it's unclear whether these tariffs will be available at present, the release reveals that they will be made available in four bands each with its own tariff, which can be tailored to customers' needs.

According to Telia Sonera, the tariff will be "competitive and adapted to the needs of consumers." Not everyone will be able to take up the offer, though, as the tariff will only be available to new and existing customers of the provider. Essentially, Telia Sonera will be offering a contract tariff. This will be an interesting test for Sonera, the Spanish electricity and gas supplier. It will be interesting to see whether it can successfully win over customers with the inclusion of an online payment option. Telia Sonera explains that the service will be offered in six countries, "where the company expects to begin offering it in October." "The move comes at a time when the Sonera Enebuyer app has enjoyed growth of 30-40% per year over the past three years and we believe that this will be the first of the Sonera brands to become a real e-commerce market leader," said Marcalis Sarma, Sonera's CEO. "This is also a very useful opportunity to show the world that in Spain, we understand that customers want to control their consumption online, they want to pay for their bills online and receive their invoices online and feel comfortable doing so, without having to visit our offices." Currently, Telia Sonera offers online payment options through its Enebuyer app in Aragon, Navarra, Badajoz, Extremadura, Murcia and Valencia. It will roll out the service in Santander, G

Q: Firing multiple function at one time, if you have two mouse buttons This is quite a difficult question for me to explain, so I'll just copy-paste the code and you can run it if you like. The idea is this: you're playing this game called 8Ball and your goal is to defeat all the balls by clicking and dragging them in the white area of the screen. This works fine, and I have added an option where if you press the left mouse button once, the ball will be fired. However if you press it again, the ball will be fired twice. If you press it a third time, then it will be fired 3 times, and so on. The problem is, I would like the "Fire 1" button to fire three times if you press it, but the "Fire 2" button to fire just once if you press it. I think it has something to do with how the event is created, but I'm not sure. The input is really simple: var ui_play = document.querySelector('#play'); var ui_clear = document.querySelector('#clear'); var left_mouse_button = 1; var right_mouse_button = 0; ui_play.addEventListener('click', function() { game_on = true; reset_ball(); }); ui_clear.addEventListener('click', function() { game_on = false; clear_all_balls();
