Is there a limit to the number of rows that can be inserted in an Oracle table using the "INSERT INTO..." syntax? For example, can I insert 1000 rows in an Oracle table (with any schema)? A: There is no specific limit, as with most other database systems. However, the maximum number of rows that can be stored in a relation is dependent on your storage space. If you have plenty of space, you can add data to that table. In case of Oracle, you can specify the number of rows that can be inserted, in a specific amount of time, or as a set of tuples. It is all stated in the documentation. Britain's Foreign Office is still looking for two of its former diplomats who have been missing since last week. The pair were reported to have been last seen Thursday. Ben Pruess and Sam Palmer, who have worked at the British Embassy in Havana, are both British, according to Spanish newspaper La Vanguardia. Brexit dominates as UK government 'faces review of all remaining ties' with Britain Laura Marcus, a Foreign Office spokeswoman in Washington, was unable to confirm whether they were still missing. Marcus said she couldn't offer more information about the matter at the moment, adding she expected
