i just downloaded the latest kodi again and it worked fine for a long time..then i hit a snag and ran the repair package. i restarted my machine after it repaired and now kodi keeps freezing up (standby button is not needed). i also cannot watch tv channels without it freezing up, as i have noticed this has happened to everyone (at least the channels i have tried). i tried to reinstall again, which i didnt see in the menu, i just went to the add-ons and removed all add ons under repository and kodi and purged the add ons and then went back to add-ons and added them one by one. kodi shows up the screen after the repair and i run it for a while and then it freezes up. any other suggestions? i cannot watch tv unless kodi freezes up. hi, can you enter your kodi menu when it freezes, so we can make sure it's locked properly? also, make sure you're not loading to the tv or on your computer via hdmi (instead of going through the tv or through the receiver). i tried your suggestion and it does not work. i have tried almost everything now. in general, i think i need a good reset since my kodi completely crashed. time to go to windows again. i will leave the addon tree for now. i tried several suggestions here on the forum, and downloaded all available kodi version to no avail. the one i have installed now crashes when i try to open. it is the exact same problem i had before. please let me know what the solution is. hi, if you could take out the ipv6 version of this addon, that would be much appreciated. i do a lot of internet radio and i can already hear the shuffling and buffering that this addon does to the internet stream. it also makes it very hard to search for things on the internet.

the best way to

troubleshoot kodi issues is to start from the very beginning, and try to narrow down the problem to its root. you said the error was 0x80000100 and from what ive seen from similar issues the error code usually means that something went wrong with the database, for example the file tsearch.db was deleted or corrupted. so you are saying that the library is not available. if you look at the kodi wiki pages for tsearch it states that it requires a specific version of tsearch.db. the version of tsearch.db that works for me is version 1.6. as for the tsearch.db, i went to the folder that contains the file and found the one that has the version number 1. i did this and kodi started downloading the new version. then i had to reinstall the old version to get rid of the error. once the old version is installed you should be able to run kodi and have no issues. hey, thanks for the post. i just downloaded the full version of kodi 17.6 and got the same error. i tried re-installing several times and got the same result. i have a windows 8.1 laptop with an amd graphics card and a discrete graphics card. does this affect your solution? it sounds like a hardware issue, but theres a couple of other things to try. first off, try downloading kodi again, only this time use the app downloader on the main menu to select the full version. doing this should give you the same error. the next thing you can try is making sure your computer has enough space for the full version of kodi to download. for example, you could try deleting the folders and files in your home folder that you dont need to make sure you have enough space for the full version. see how that works out and let us know how it goes. 5ec8ef588b
