Effective Serial Communication with a HardwareSerial Arduino library. Offers ease of use and great versatility. If you need serial communication for an Arduino and your project needs it, you should take a look at the HardwareSerial library. The HardwareSerial uses an I2C bus in communication with the Arduino's hardware serial port. Its easy to use and works across all Arduino boards. The Serial object allows you to connect and control the Arduino from your Delphi and C++Builder projects using a HardwareSerial object. The base class handles all communications and each serial port instance is a reference to a HardwareSerial object. The Serial object is a class member of the Arduino library. The library is a free software distribution of Arduino's circuit design files. You can compile and upload the circuit design files to an Arduino board using the Arduino IDE.
