Watcher Pro v2.6.15+ will automatically monitor your system for unwanted changes such as file deletion, file creation, modification, and changes to files permissions. Once any of these changes are found Watcher Pro will alert you. You will have the option to log the change. The file you are watching can be displayed in a system tray icon. Effortless Monitoring: Watcher Pro monitors your system in real time for changes to the following locations: C:\Windows\System32 C:\Windows\SysWOW64 C:\Users* C:\Program Files (x86)* C:\Program Files* C:\Documents and Settings* C:\ProgramData You can quickly add locations to the search criteria by holding down the Ctrl key while clicking on the plus button. Watch What You Want: You can watch files, folders, or even the entire drive. Also, you can tell Watcher Pro to start watching a folder after a specific date, an interval of time, or a user logon. Scheduled Reminders: Watcher Pro can be configured to send email notifications of change alerts to the users that will be affected by the change. These notifications can be sent at any time during the day or night. * Watcher Pro will only alert you when a change is actually made. Watcher Pro will not alert you if files are deleted, changed, or modified after a change is made. Get the details and watch your system for suspicious changes. You can also set a custom email notification for any change alert. So, feel free to use your email address as you wish. Download and install it from HERE Will the reliability of saliva and urine to assess lead levels in adults be maintained? Saliva and urine samples collected from 197 adults were measured for lead, both before and after iron treatment, to ascertain whether iron treatment would affect the reliability of the samples. Lead levels before iron treatment were in the range of 6.5 to 8.7 micrograms/dl for saliva and 1.5 to 4.4 micrograms/dl for urine, and did not differ significantly. On the other hand, lead levels after iron treatment were within the range of 0.6 to 3.6 micrograms/dl for saliva and 0.2 to 0.7 micrograms/dl for urine. The levels were less than 0.5 micrograms/dl in all except one person. The correlation between the two sampling methods was high ($r = 0.75$) and comparable to a previous study. For the entire population, the correlation between lead levels in the two sampling methods (i.e. the overall values of r) was also high ($r = 0.78$). As a result, the use of iron treatment would not appear to affect the reliability of saliva and urine to assess lead levels in adults. Robert Goodman (artist) Robert Goodman (1884-1958) was an Australian painter of portraits, landscapes and portraits of his family, his homes and his farm animals. He also made a number of scenes of Sydney city life and history, of church and shrine architecture, and various religious subjects. Early life Robert Goodman was born in 1884. He was educated at the South Sydney Technical School, then at the East Sydney Technical College, and later at the National Gallery School. Career Goodman became a member of the Federal Art Society of Australia in 1911, and exhibited regularly with them, also holding a number of solo exhibitions. His paintings included landscapes, church architecture and religious subjects, family scenes, portraits, and scenes of Sydney life and history. His works of the early 1940s reflect the hardships of wartime life, when he noted "I am working hard but I am not doing anything at all worthwhile". He died in 1958.
