Required fields are marked *Q: UINavigationController Blocks Application from reloading in iOS 7 I'm working on an app where the user can switch between ViewControllers by tapping a button in the header. I have created a ViewController which is being displayed on the rootViewController when the user taps the button. This is working so far. But the problem is, that when the user clicks the back button on the device I'm noticing that the app is blocked and does not reload. I'm running into this error: viewWillDisappear: is being called, but still running I'm not sure whether the back button is working as expected. A: So I managed to fix my problem and for those who might face the same issue here is the answer: Make sure to set your ViewController as a "Modal" Controller if ([self.navigationController respondsToSelector:@selector(presentViewController:animated:completion:)]) { [self.navigationController presentViewController:myViewController animated:YES completion:nil]; } else { [self.navigationController pushViewController:myViewController animated:YES]; } This basically means that you don't have to manually "modal" the view controllers before pushing them. Also make sure to include the "willPushViewController" and "didPopViewController" methods to know which view controller is actually being pushed and which one is being popped. -(void)willPushViewController:(UIViewController *)viewController animated:(BOOL)animated { } -(void)didPopViewController:(UIViewController )viewController animated:(BOOL)animated { } Q: Run all jobs in a Defer list I want to run all the jobs within a list of Defer-s. That's, I would like to run in parallel a list of threads. Here is a short example with how I try to do it: ( Initialisation ) ( Get the directory of the input file *) %directory = pathToFile["~/Desktop/test"]
